The exponential increase in population, indiscriminate building activities and degradation of ecosystems led to severe climate change all over the globe. Governments in all countries are responding to it in various ways. The interdisciplinary nature and scale of projects imply the need for change in the role of architects. They have to be more collaborative and prepared for occupying top managerial positions in projects. Rapid development in technological advancements have impacted teaching practices architecture considerably. The COVID-19 has further aggravated this situation and forced us to acquire more updated knowledge, new techniques. It will be worthwhile to discuss the findings of research on all these issues in the pedagogy of architecture.

The Council of Architecture (CoA) is the apex body regulating the education and profession of Architecture in India. This International Conference on Architecture Education by CoA aims to provide a platform for bringing out research and innovative ideas to shape education for the future of the built environment considering the present context. Researchers, academicians, professionals and students pursuing post-graduate programs are invited to contribute their research papers for this conference on the stated themes.

ELIGIBILITY

- Researchers Academicians
- Professionals
